I am so excited for the race to be here. My biggest stress right now is that I haven't eaten since the previous Thursday. I really need to eat something, anything, before I start running again. I've been keeping my liquid intake to mostly water so I can continue to get used to not drinking all day like I did in a different sport. I've been drinking at least 2 liters of water a day to stay well hydrated. I haven't been eating right, because I haven't been eating enough. I'm planning on eating before I run again. I had my physical on Thursday and everything is going great. My gym teacher said I am in pretty good shape for someone who has just begun weight training. My weight is at a good starting point to be on track for the long term. My Doctor is great, I feel more confident knowing that I have been receiving the proper treatment. I know that I have been pretty out of it lately and I don't plan on being like that in the future. I am tired, it has been a long month. This race is going to be one of my toughest training runs yet. I have never done a full marathon before. I have run about 7-10 miles in the past, but that was only a half. So I'm really out of shape right now, but excited for the challenge. We are also gearing up for another fund raising event at my house for the family of the homeless woman that was killed by the lightning. We are excited for that event, but I wish there were more than just my family involved. I would love it if everyone in the area would come to
